

ANSWERED

Is an online degree from the University of Law the same as an Undergraduate or Postgraduate degree, taught on campus?

Yes, all our degrees are the same, whether you study online or on campus. We have a range of undergraduate and postgraduate degrees, including law, business, and arts. All our degrees are accredited by the relevant professional bodies, and we have a strong track record of student success.

How flexible are your online degrees?

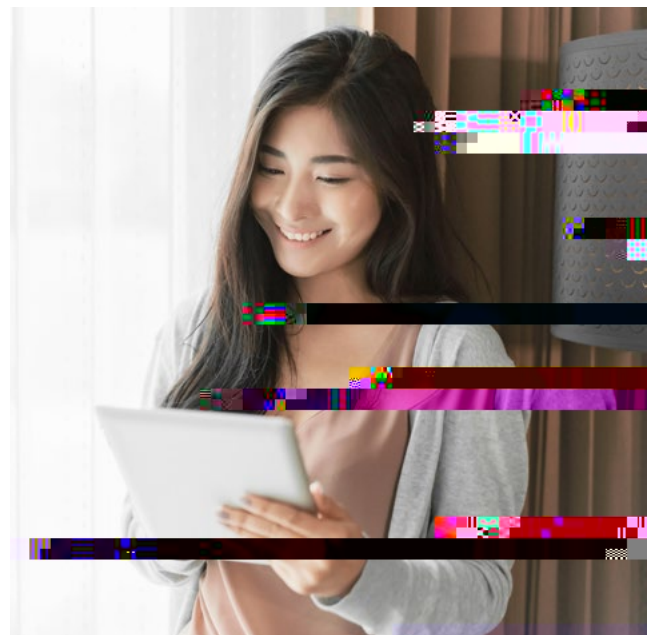

Our online degrees are designed to be flexible, so you can fit your studies around your work and other commitments. You can study at your own pace, and you can access your courses from anywhere, at any time. We also offer a range of part-time and accelerated options, so you can complete your degree in less time if you prefer.

Is your online learning platform easy to use?

Yes, our online learning platform is designed to be user-friendly and intuitive. It includes a range of features to help you get the most out of your studies, including interactive content, discussion forums, and virtual classrooms. We also offer a range of support services, including technical support and academic advice, to ensure you have a smooth and successful learning experience.

If I chose to study online, can I still access your physical campuses?

Yes, you can access our physical campuses if you choose to study online. We have a range of facilities, including libraries, study spaces, and student societies, that you can use if you prefer. We also offer a range of support services, including technical support and academic advice, to ensure you have a smooth and successful learning experience. However, it's important to note that some of our courses, such as those in law and business, may require you to attend on-campus sessions for practical skills training or placements.

How will I meet other students if I choose to study online?

There are a number of ways in which you can meet other students if you choose to study online. You can join virtual study groups, attend online seminars and lectures, and participate in online discussions. You can also meet other students in person at the university if you have the opportunity to visit campus.
